

Diamonds Will Displace All Colored Gems in Milady's Choice of Jewels for Coming Season

Designs Never Showed Greater Variety. With Platinum Relegating Gold to the More Useful Pieces.

Pendant Watches and V-Shaped Brooches Popular—Grace and Slimness First Requisites in Necklets.

Milady of fashion, who glories in the changes of styles and follows closely the last word of the Parisian modiste, is now given ample opportunity to supplement the dictates of the dressmaker and satisfy the whim of personal adornment, for not in years have styles in jewelry been as distinctive and pleasing as at the present time.

During the last few years jewelry has become of far greater importance as an accessory of dress than it ever was before.

Not alone is this confined to the gentler sex, but with jewelry for men, especially rings, there is a tendency for elaboration. This does not mean that a watch chain big enough and strong enough to hitch a horse, worn across the waistcoat with a charm that resembles a horse weight in size, ever will be in vogue, but the man who follows closely the dictates of dress can now wear a rich perfect propriety and good taste scarfpin, waistcoat set, and other jewelry more ornate, more daintily created, still clinging, however, to the rather severe lines.

Colored Gems Discarded

The tendency has been, during the spring, to discard in the more exclusive shops of Washington, as well as New York, all colored gems, as well as pearls, in the more sumptuous jewel pieces. Diamonds predominate, absolutely. Platinum is the most popular and most modish mounting for diamonds, while gold is being steadily relegated to the more useful pieces, such as cases, vanities, and chatelaines.

One of the most distinctive novelties strictly for summer wear seen in the shops of Washington is the new "V" brooch pin. This pin is being made in a variety of styles ranging in price from $1 to the elaborate jeweled affairs, costing from $5 up.

Another novelty which is making a decided hit and promises to become very popular is the new platinum and diamond encrusted watch. The pendant watch is now much more favored than the bracelet watch.

Pendant Watch Acclaimed

In a recent issue of the "Jeweler's Circular," the vogue of the pendant watch was described as follows:

"Watches are seldom seen in the evenings, but for elaborate daytime affairs the pendant has been found more appropriate than the wrist watch, in all its glory, ever could be. The pendant watches are exquisitely finished in every detail, and with the matching scarfpin chain, they make excellent jewels."

"A most attractive design was sent from abroad lately for a watch framed in an inch-wide border of gems. Diamonds large and small are used in these ornate jewels, and encased in the cases, jewelers are taking up the idea with enthusiasm, as they believe it will be one of the 'savants' of the season. A group of these watches is pictured over here above very strikingly, and though they are by no means as extreme as the foreign articles."

"They are used with a scarfpin chain to match; the chain follows the case in pattern and material, and the frame is copied in the ornaments and sides of the chain."

"One of these watches has a case of royal blue enamel, edged with a border of diamonds and sapphires, and a scarfpin chain of matched links, to match the blue water, with diamond and sapphire ornaments."

Grace First Requisite

In the new necklets diamonds and grace are the first requisites. The freakish hair ornaments, which were worn during the winter, have been discarded for a type of line beauty. The upright pieces attached to these jewels are placed either directly in the center front or on one side at the back of the head.

Many novelties are seen in spring. For some time there has been a tendency toward discarding the beehive, with the result that some very pretty effects have been brought out.

Simplicity of line characterized much of the new fashionable jewelry, and this is especially notable in many of the necklets, brooches, and earrings. The grave and beauty of an appearance, ornament and treatment in this class of jewelry is a comparatively fertile field for the designer. The possibilities for the appointments in jewelry are almost unlimited. In these articles of adornment holds them in the most favored position by fashion. The pendant watch is mostly simple with elaboration on the clasp.

One Exception.

There are so many established ways of wearing jewelry that it is difficult to think up a new one, but a customer who lunched at a famous hotel yesterday, being in a sentimental, contemplative mood, the customer said: "I suppose people from every nation under the sun wear jewelry."

"Yes, sir," said the waiter.

"It is depressing to reflect on the generations that have sat at these old tables," the customer went on dreamily. "Old and young, learned and ignorant, gay and grave, rich and poor—"

At that point in the reverie the waiter stared up indignantly.

"Not poor," he corrected. "It costs money to eat in this place."

Then he presented the bill, and the customer heartily concurred.—Exchange.

New Mexican Towns Are

Flooded by Heavy Rains

SANTA FE, N. M., May 9.—New Mexico has been drenched by the heaviest rain storm in weeks, and as a result of a terrific down-pour during the last week all over the eastern half of the State, towns have been completely isolated. Roads, bridges, and railroads have been washed out, and a total damage of probably hundreds of thousands of dollars has been done.

The town of Clayton is almost cut off from the rest of the world. The town is situated on a high plateau, and the only way in or out is by a single road, which has been washed out in several places.

WOMAN'S WIT TRAPS

THREE BOY BANDITS

Hides Weapons While They Eat After Stabbing Deputy and Defying Arrest.

MAYFIELD, Maine, May 9.—The three boy bandits, who successfully defied a posse comprised of eight deputy sheriffs for two days, and who said that they would each kill their man before being captured, were trapped through the wit of a woman.

Armed with two rifles, a shotgun and several revolvers, the three boys, Earnest Charles and Earl Helstrom, shut themselves in a log cabin in a clearing in the woods, eight miles from here, after being pursued. They had looted several stores and houses, and were now because of the fact that they are all crack shots, Deputy Sheriff Grove H. Coffin had a hasty retreat after finding their hiding place.

With seven other deputies he returned, but they were compelled to abandon the siege. The boys then left the log cabin, and a single deputy named Frank Johnston, and when he tried to arrest them, stabbed him several times with a hunting knife.

From here they went to the home of Mrs. Webster Johnston and asked for food. She recognized them and while they were eating took the pile of weapons they had placed on the sideboard and hid them in the woodshed. She then telephoned to Deputy Coffin, who arrived there. They will be sent to State school for boys, and the oldest of the trio is only fourteen years.

LITTLE WORK DONE ON SOCIAL ADVANCE

Child and Woman Labor, Workmen's Compensation, and Suffrage Have No Chance.

This session of Congress will adjourn with little or nothing accomplished in the way of legislation looking to social progress. It was assumed in many quarters that much of such legislation would be enacted this session because of the stress laid upon it by the Progressive party.

But all the indications are that when the session closes most of this legislation will be found either securely pigeon-holed in committee or buried far down on the calendar, where there is little chance of reaching it.

Child labor legislation is in this category. It seems to stand no show of enactment, either before adjournment, or in the life of this Congress. The opposition to it is so strong that it will be able to block it if the plans for adjournment in July are carried through. It is not on the program which has been discussed between the House and Senate leaders and the President.

Progress Is Blocked.

The proposed legislation for an eight-hour day for women will also be found side-tracked when the session closes. An eight-hour law for the District of Columbia, applicable to women workers, has been enacted by this Congress, but little progress has been made in respect to general legislation on this subject. Again there is workmen's compensation, of any measure on this subject. At one time in the preceding Congress, there seemed a real prospect of getting something done on this question. Comparatively little has been heard of it in this Congress.

Woman suffrage has been turned down by the Senate, and by the House democratic caucus. Efforts are being made to get provision put into the trust legislation which will encourage organizations of workmen and farmers by taking them out from under the Sherman law, but it is regarded as doubtful whether this provision can be forced through. The long debate which will be aroused by such a proposition is not consonant with early adjournment.

Seems Destined to Go.

Rural credit legislation, while generally considered financial, has a most important social side, in that it is calculated to help conditions among the farmers and persons in agricultural communities and thus to stimulate agricultural production and tend to reduce living costs. This seems destined to go by the board.

Legislation to strengthen the pure food law and the meat inspection law has so far arrived nowhere. The chances are it will not at this session. In general, the democratic party will be able to go before the public this fall and lay claim to large accomplishments for the betterment of social conditions. Most of the democratic leaders in Congress have manifested little concern about this class of measures.
